Japan's GPIF loses $52 bn in stock rout

BLOOMBERG
26 August

The world's biggest pension fund posted a $52 billion loss last quarter as stocks tumbled and the yen surged, wiping out all investment gains since it overhauled its strategy by boosting shares and cutting bonds.

Japan's Government Pension Investment Fund (GPIF) lost 3.9 per cent, or 5.2 trillion yen ($52 billion), in the three months ended June 30, reducing assets to 129.7 trillion yen, it said in Tokyo on Friday. That erases a 4.1 trillion yen investing return for the previous six quarters starting October 2014, the month it decided to put half its assets into equities.

The quarterly decline follows a 5.3 trillion yen loss in the fiscal year through March, the worst annual performance since the global financial crisis.

After benefiting from a surge in Japanese equities and a weaker yen earlier in Prime Minister Shinzo Abe's term, GPIF has posted losses as domestic stocks tumble and gains in the currency reduce the value of overseas assets. Still, for Sumitomo Mitsui Trust Bank, that's no reason to veer from the current approach.

"Since its investments are tied to market moves, it's natural that this would happen and there's no point looking at it with a short-term view," said Ayako Sera, a Tokyo-based market strategist at the bank. "GPIF is so big that its losses look huge even though the fluctuations in its investments just mirror the market."

The fund's Japanese shares sank 7.4

per cent in the period as the benchmark Topix index lost 7.5 per cent. More than 80 per cent of GPIF's local equity investments are passive. Overseas stocks lost 7.8 per cent, while foreign debt fell 8 per cent, as the yen surged 9.1 per cent against the dollar. The only asset class to post a profit was domestic bonds, which rose in value as the Bank of Japan's negative interest rates sent yields lower.

"We invest with a long-term view," President Norihiro Takahashi said in a statement on Friday.

Volkswagen to add $1.2 bn to scandal cost

BLOOMBERG
26 August

Volkswagen will pay about $1.2 billion to reimburse US dealers for losses caused by the emissions-cheating scheme, a person familiar with the matter said.

Volkswagen will also buy back unfixable used vehicles under the same terms as those given consumers, lawyers for the 652 dealerships said in a statement without disclosing the value of the tentative settlement. The German automaker said separately it agreed to make cash payments and provide additional benefits to dealers to resolve their claims.

The agreement, which raises the amount Volkswagen will pay to resolve US lawsuits to $16.5 billion, removes one obstacle for the carmaker as it seeks to repair its tarnished reputation. While the automaker has already settled with car owners and regulators, Volkswagen still faces investor claims and possible criminal charges. Volkswagen also doesn't have an approved fix for the $62,000 rigged diesel vehicles still polluting US roads.
